

Magellan Healthcare Provides Vital Resources for Adults and Youth During Mental Health Month

April 20, 2021

PHOENIX--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Apr. 20, 2021-- Magellan Healthcare, the behavioral and specialty healthcare segment of Magellan Health, Inc. (NASDAQ: MGLN), today announced resources and programs to support individuals and families in honor of Mental Health Month in May.

More than two in five Americans are struggling with mental or behavioral health issues associated with COVID-19, according to a report from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention on mental health, substance use and suicidal ideation during the pandemic. While the increased pressures from health concerns, economic instability and social issues on adults are clear, it is also important to consider the mental health impacts on children and young people.

"Now more than ever, people of all generations are facing a mental health crisis in this country due to impacts of the pandemic," said Matthew Miller, senior vice president, behavioral health, Magellan Healthcare. "With more than a year passing since the first COVID-19 case was announced in the U.S., we're still dealing with the fallout in so many aspects of our lives. For Mental Health Month in May and throughout the year, Magellan is committed to increasing awareness about mental health and providing helpful resources that support our families and communities."

During Mental Health Month, Magellan is hosting and participating in a number of virtual events, including those focused on the mental health of children and youth.

Upcoming Virtual Events

Wednesday, May 5, 2021, 2:00 p.m. ET: Join the Magellan Healthcare webinar, "How are your kids doing?"

Magellan's Keith Brown, MD, child psychiatrist and medical director, and Greg Dicharry, CPRP, youth empowerment director, will share their knowledge and years of experience working with children to improve mental health and wellness, and answer audience questions.
